

OUR LAND RIGHTS POLICY

The land is vital to our lives, whether we use it for shelter, food, or business operations. It supplies livelihoods, supports communities, and generates vital natural resources on which we depend.

“LAND IS NOT A MERE COMMODITY BUT AN ESSENTIAL ELEMENT FOR THE REALIZATION OF MANY HUMAN RIGHTS.”

The United Nations Office of the High Commissioner on Human Rights

By endorsing the Ten Principles of the United Nations Global Compact (UNGC), respecting human rights, labor, the environment, and anti-corruption principles, Logoplaste is committed to supporting them, as well as respecting the protection of internationally proclaimed human rights. Logoplaste has adopted policies to protect against human rights abuses, including the rights to land and the natural resources of local communities and Indigenous people.

Logoplaste is always committed to conducting its business in compliance with national laws and internationally accepted best practices and in assessing, as well as minimizing, the social, economic, and environmental impacts, or potential impacts, of its business activities on local communities, including land rights, such as the right of Indigenous peoples to their ancestral lands.

All negotiations on land transactions, or land use, follow national laws with transparency. No action is taken, over the land and of communities with Indigenous people without their free, prior, and informed consent.

PROTECTING LAND RIGHTS AND ALL THAT IT ENTAILS ENSURES A SUSTAINABLE FUTURE FOR GENERATIONS TO COME.
